very successful and a very quiet one, but once or twice did he have occasion to play with the hickory.

John C. Stone succeeded Mr. Williamson. It is probable that the manikin was purchased during his supervision. Mr. Stone taught a very successful school, which closed with an excellent program.

The next term was taught by A. W. Meisse. The register shows an enrollment of 32 pupils. The game of football was introduced at this time and the muscles as well as brains were developed.

D. B. Black taught the next term, teaching successfully the fall and winter term of '92-'93 and '94. Arbor Day exercises were held during the spring of '93, and a number of trees were planted in the yard, eight of which are living. During this term the geographical chart was presented to the school by the board of directors. The term closed on the 25th day of March, 1905.

Mr. Black was succeeded by one of his pupils, John R. Markel, who taught a very successful term.

Benner Armstrong, Harry Shupe, W. H. Barton and Mary Armstrong followed Mr. Black in the order as named above, and are credited as having given complete satisfaction.

The present teacher, D. C. Macklin has just completed an unusually successful term of school, and celebrated the event, Friday, May 1, with following very interesting and successful program:
